Formatting Title page

Before you go on to create a title page, you need to know that according to the Chicago manual, a title page is not mandatory. You only need to include it if you are directed by your teacher.

If not directed, you do not need a separate cover page and can only write the title of your essay on the top of the first page in the center.

On the title page, the title appears one-third of the way down from the top of the page

If there is a subtitle, it would appear below the title

The writer's name, class, date of submission, etc. are given at two-thirds of the page

All text on the title page is double-spaced and centered

The title page is not numbered

Reference Page

The Chicago style gives writers two options to document sources: The notes-bibliography and the author-date system. If you are using the author-date system, you will enlist your used sources in the reference list at the end of your paper. Here are some tips to create a reference list according to the Chicago manual:

It would start on a new page

All of the references are alphabetized by the author's last name

In case there is no author of the source, you can alphabetize it according to the title

The page is named References and it appears at the top, centered

In case of several references by the same author, you should arrange it chronologically, with the earliest work appearing first

For references longer than one line, a hanging indent is applied. You can search for assistance from online service providers that provide their services at reasonable prices.
